

Yesterday I got a surprise visit from more than 50 children from the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). They came to show their appreciation for our leadership and support of embryonic stem cell research. I cannot express how overwhelmed I was by their visit. These children are providing the momentum and support to remove federal stem cell restrictions. They are the courageous ones and I am so thankful for their strength and support.

